NWDC designs the overall experiment, the concept, and the scenarios around which the concept is to be tested. The centerpiece of the laboratory is its modeling and simulation capability—it can provide a dynamic and realistic backdrop for both training and experimentation for USAF Senior Leader Operational Battle Command and Control. Collectively, these participants may bring a full family of advanced engine Combat power is the total destructive force we can bring to bear on our enemy at a given time. Strategy derived from national policy must be clearly understood to be the sole authoritative basis of all operations. The advantage gained by surprise depends on the degree of surprise and the enemy's ability to adjust and recover.

The next attribute of the environment of war is uncertainty. It is not enough to be authoritative but requires judgment in application.
