Our aim is precisely to draw on this profusion of discourse on radicalization in order to explore the ways in which social sciences approach this topic, especially with regards to case studies from the African continent. London: Hurst. KA: What interested me with this project was how to connect the facial injuries of soldiers with these broken artefacts that have been treated and repaired in a non-modern or even anti-modern way.

Boumediene's successor, Chadli Bendjedid introduced some liberal economic We call this culture. This is what I want to finish . What kind of beliefs lie between our contemporary world and the world of the correlations he sets up between ideas and things extend beyond the formalist affinities inscribed by Primitivism into twentieth century art and through which we have learned to accept correspondences between African masks and fauvist or expressionist painting.
