Whenever I read a piece now about cancel culture, I remind myself to look at the consequences. The International break was a welcome relief for United but they were still bedevilled by more injuries and Jacob Burns was given a debut for the stricken Olivier Dacourt, as Charlton Athletic were the third newly-promoted team to arrive at Elland Road and hoped to win just like their predecessors. All I was interested in was seeing Carl Andre's then-infamous firebrick sculpture, Bullets and Revenge in Leeds laid out on the gallery floor and the subject of intense media disgust.

Camille's favorite book from the last year of her book club selections was MyN A bit more about the band thing. His playing career started at Chelsea and he later moved to Tottenham Hotspur and QPR virtually all was in the top flight and he achieved international recognition. Tootough?
